

Learning tools proposals get $1.6 million funding

THE Lee Kuan Yew Fund for Bilingualism will fund 10 proposals to create teaching and learning resources that support the learning of languages.

Ms Sim Ann, the fund's vice-chairman, announced at a press conference yesterday that it will commit about $1.6 million towards these projects over the next two years.

The 10 recipients include organisations like the Institute of Technical Education and individuals such as songwriter Richard Wan Kum Wah.

The projects include bilingual picture books and teaching aids, some of which will be available by the end of next year. The fund was set up by former prime minister Lee Kuan Yew last year to promote the learning of English and mother tongue.
